Increasing Strong Strike Sentiment Indicated By Brotherhood Members

GRABLE EXPECTED TO CONFER WITH BOARD

Maintenance of Way Men, Already Out, Will Not Be Expelled

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 17.—Peace negotiations in the railroad strike, temporarily were at a standstill today. The rail executives and strike leaders in today's developments were expected to indicate more clearly the ultimate outcome.

However much importance is attached to the number of shopmen returning to work today, as this day marked the time limit on many roads for retaining seniority and other rights.

(By International News Service.)

CHICAGO, July 17.—Stationary firemen and oilers on railroads throughout the country joined the strike of shopmen today in response to strike orders sent out last week by Timothy Healy, head of the union.

It was expected that about 8,000 men would participate in today's walkout. Reports received here indicate that the brotherhood of maintenance of way employees are manifesting an increasingly strong strike sentiment.

E. F. Grable, president of the brotherhood, was expected here today to confer with the United States railway board to prevent railroads from requiring members of his organization to do work formerly done by striking shopmen. Continuation of this practice, Grable warned, will result in a walkout.

A meeting of the grand lodge of the maintenance of way brotherhoods, which includes about 200 general chairmen of the organization, will be held in Detroit Thursday. This meeting, it was believed, will definitely fix the strike policy of the organization.

Reports from eastern sections indicate a strong strike sentiment in the brotherhood.

Besides the maintenance of way employees, the clerks and freight handlers are reporting in favor of a walkout. Thirty four chairmen of the organization have asked President Fitzgerald to sanction a strike against the Chicago and Northwest.

Acts of violence were reported from many sections of the country over Sunday, but these generally were sporadic and were handled by local authorities.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 17.—Federal Judge Triebel today announced he would impose jail and penitentiary sentences and not fines on strikers who violated federal court injunctions.

NEW MISTRESS OF THE GOULD MILLIONS

Mrs. George Jay Gould

The announcement of the marriage in Paris of George Jay Gould to Mrs. Alice Sinclair, former musical comedy actress, caused a stir in New York society. The first Mrs. Gould, formerly Edith Kingdon, the actress, dropped dead last November while playing golf with her husband at their country home, Georgian Court, Lake wood, N. J. Members of the Gould family are said to have registered no opposition to the marriage.

REPORTS OF ROPER CAUSE ENTHUSIASM AMONG CRAFTSMEN

The following official statement was issued today by H. C. Hutchison, chairman of the press committee of the federated crafts:

As usual the Masonic theater meeting of the striking rail workers closed with prayer. This morning the Chaplain called on S. E. Roper to dismiss the men. Mr. Roper had just spoken against the use of liquor, and in his petition he asked that no man defile his body with strong drink. In his regular speech Roper said that it was a fact that since the response to the strike call, where whiskey was now obtainable in Louisville, it was selling at almost a third cheaper than formerly. He also said that prohibition strikers in Louisville, had recently supported a movement to punish those who had sought to debase people "and hundreds of gallons of whiskey has been poured out lately by the federal prohibition officers."

In speaking of the surprise expressed to him by known supporters of the so-called "open shop," that the railroad employees had come out practically 100 percent strong, Roper said that the war work of the employees in collective effort in raising money for war purposes had taught hundreds the value collective effort. Mr. Roper said that outside of the fact that the political parties and the church councils had endorsed collective bargaining, that the benefits of it had convinced all classes of its high value. The general report of Mr. Roper on strike conditions aroused the assembly to a high pitch of enthusiasm, as manifested by the cheers that greeted Mr. Roper's speech, which lasted about an hour.

HOME MELONS ON THE MARKET TODAY

Many fine country melons made their appearance on the local market today. The melons are of fine size and found ready sale. There is no melon which will compare with the home raised product and the public is always eager to procure some of them.

ORGANIZED LABOR MAY NOT ENDORSE ANY FOR GOVERNOR

(Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily) MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 17.—The Alabama Federation of Labor will not endorse any candidate for governor in the primary August 8, according to information which came to Montgomery today from Birmingham. The story is that the committee of the federation which is charged with the duty of making suggestions to the members regarding the support and non-support of candidates met in Birmingham last Monday and decided not to make any suggestion regarding the race for governor.

However, the committee will advise the members of the federation regarding other candidates. Reports are that the list of those who will receive the support of the committee of the federation will be sent out to the members during the next few days.

In Montgomery the Central Labor Union has delivered ballots to all members with the suggestion that they express their preference prior to the action of the committee. This ballot carried the names of all candidates for state, county and party positions, but the names of those who were looked upon as friendly to organized labor were placed in black type.

With the ballot went the request that they be delivered to the committee not later than July 10 in order that the official endorsement of the union might be placed on the candidates who received the majority of the votes.

Bond Issue Not To Increase Taxation

It is pointed out by the city officials of Albany that the election for the funding debt of the city in which is embraced the amount of $60,000.00, will not increase taxation, but will be taken care of out of the general funds of the city. The election is to be held in the four wards of the city Wednesday, July 19th. This is precisely the same bond election which was unanimously voted some time ago by the tax payers of Albany, but on account of error in publication of the notice, it was necessary to hold it again.

GOOD WEATHER AIDS COTTON CROP

With two beautiful, sunshiny, seasonable days, many expressions could be heard on the good appearance of the cotton crop, which is putting on fruit, and Monday morning the fields were adorned with countless blooms of white and red. Those who have followed the crop closely throughout the growing season are now of the opinion that the plant has sufficiently progressed toward a crop to insure fair returns. The bottom crop is well toward maturity, it is said by planters from every section of the county, and an optimistic spirit has taken the place where doubt and uncertainty predominated three weeks ago.

It is also said that the late plantings of corn have progressed to a point where, with seasonable conditions from now on, a fair harvest can be gathered.

On every hand is seen the evidence of hay harvesting, which, under the influences of plenty of moisture, is reported to be fine. Cowpeas and soy beans are likewise planted in considerable acreage. To sum it up in the words of one large planter, "we are a whole lot better off than it was hoped to be 30 days ago."

HOPE DASHED FOR COAL STRIKE END

(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Hopes for a quick and early settlement of the national coal strike while all the major parties to the controversy are gathered in Washington, apparently were dashed to the ground this afternoon with the announcement that the policy committee of the United Mine Workers is to leave the capital and return home.

The policy committee, which is some 200 strong, is the committee which makes and unmake strikes and the present controversy cannot be peacefully adjusted without its consent.

(By International News Service.)

WELLSBURG, West Va., July 17.—A mine war is raging today at Cliftonville, West Virginia, near here.

Sheriff H. H. Duvall, of this city is dead, and at nine o'clock this morning the casualties were listed at 13 with fighting still in progress at Cliftonville, where mine tipple have been burned.

State troopers are being rushed to the scene from all sections of the state.

The mines at Cliftonville, on what is known as the Ferguson lease, are operated by the J. C. McTinney interests of Wheeling, one of the biggest operations in the panhandle country of West Virginia.

They have been working non-union men and while there have been several clashes, nothing of a serious nature occurred until last night when it was said miners attempted to destroy the tipple with dynamite.

Guards and miners soon were exchanging shots, while Sheriff Duvall and deputies were dispatched from here. Early in the action Sheriff Duvall was shot and killed.

Despite efforts of defenders, the tipple was fired and completely destroyed. Aside from Sheriff Duvall the only other official among the casualties was M. O. Mosingo, of Wellsburg, brought here this morning, shot through the jaw. Other casualties are from among the union and non-union miners.

Telephones were cut early in the battle and communication with Cliftonville is being maintained only by automobiles. At 9 o'clock 13 dead and wounded had been brought here, the wounded being rushed to hospitals in Steubenville, O.

It was reported the union miners were entrenched and that sniping was in progress. While state troops were ordered to the scene, they have not arrived in sufficient numbers to dislodge the attackers.

Governor Morgan was notified almost immediately after the mine war broke out last night.

WE FAVOR ACCEPTANCE OF HENRY FORD'S BID
FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.WE INSIST ON GOOD SANITATION;
BUT WE ARE LIVING TOO FAST.

A good deal is being written of late about American manners and customs as revealed to the rest of the world during the great war. Europe has had its eyes open to the fact that indeed, a new nation and a new civilization has arisen in the Western Hemisphere.

Especially has the superior sanitation, in this country as compared to Europe, attracted favorable comment in England and on the continent. Recently an English agent came to this country to study our dairy methods, and has expressed great surprise at the care we take as to our milk supply. He stated that such sanitary regulations as we required were not dreamed of in Europe. As any informed person knows who is in touch with our milk and butter supply, the herds of cows relied upon to furnish this supply are carefully examined periodically by governmental agencies as to their health, especially as regards tuberculosis. It is the practice sanctioned by law to force owners of diseased cows to sell them for their hide and tallow value, the government also allowing a nominal sum to reimburse the owner of the cow forced to sell her. It is estimated by the best writers—that this country is thirty years ahead of the best European nations in point of sanitation. Cities like Albany and Decatur pay out more money and give more attention to sanitation than similar cities four times their size in England. But it is doubtful, the same writers assert if our health conditions are any better than those in England. There can be no doubt that Americans are the most enterprising people in the world, except as to the care of their personal health. We protect our selves from outside disease germs, from the annoyance of the flies, and from accumulations of filth of all kinds, but we persist in drawing too strongly on our physical and nervous energy. We are spend-thrift our nervous and physical resources just as we were and continue to be careless of our great natural resources. Much of the apparent wealth of this nation is due to our actual destruction of natural resources. We are rich because we are able and energetic, yes, but also because we have gone ahead and stripped the forest lands of their forests, and the deep soil lands of their soil, and in neither instance have we paid enough attention to reforesting the forests and resowing the soil. The great difficulty we have in enlisting public sentiment in favor of conservation of all kinds, proves that as a nation, America is not fond of taking thought for the morrow. We carry our individualism to the point that we let the things of the future take thought for themselves. The possible inconvenience we may bring upon posterity, by our high handed use of the resources of the present seems to worry us not a bit—the problems of the future are the least of our troubles. Even though we are careful of the sanitary conditions under which we live, if we use up our energy too fast what will it profit us? If we become all handed by cutting down our forests, with no plan or thought for replacing them, the race as a whole will gain nothing, but lose much. In view of the outward care we take in sanitation, Americans should be the strongest and healthiest people on earth, but we are not, according to the same writers who praise our plans for pure food and pure air. It is pointed out that with all our expensive plans for good health, our standards of public health are no higher than those of Europe. What we save in sanitation" says one writer, "we lose in nervous dissipation". And if in our hurry we leave this country poor as to soil, and even as to forests, what shall it profit the future generations, that we have become rich by diminishing too freely on their estate?"

HAT OTHERS MAY EXIST.

There is a bigger better idea among business men than merely making and counting the money. It is the idea that others who work are thereby able to have a home and the blessings which go with it. They are enabled to gain something by laying aside something for the proverbial "rainy day". Those who by placing the means in reach those who would pursue and work, are doing more than merely running a business. They are creating something; making it possible with places where trained hands can carry on; furnishing the material where the adept can weave from the raw material fabrics which the world needs; helping others. In this respect those who have made it possible to create the different businesses of the city are philanthropists. Many of the larger firms of the country are inaugurating co-operative plants, sharing with their helpers some of the profits of the labor of their hands. This creates a mutual interest in the business at hand.

They become co-partners, sharing alike as their interests indicate. Not all are cold hearted corporations. During the last few years there has grown a spirit of mutual feeling in some instances which has linked the interests of one with the other into a common lot. Play grounds are provided; schools are furnished; hospitals are at hand; amusement houses are provided, and many other helpful things are placed at the disposal of those who help to create the big things which big business does. This spirit is bound to grow and multiply, else a backward step must be taken.

A GREAT CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAM.

With the different road projects in the county under state and county supervision getting well under way, there can be said to now be in readiness to begin actual work, more men and teams and other road equipment is gathered together than at any other time in the history of the country. Several fine bridges are to be built also, and isolated sections which heretofore have had no road over which they could travel the year round, are to have the advantage of fine macadam roadways. At Lacon in the southern end of the county there are three or four road building outfits at work, and the large rock crushing machinery is in place and at work. Steam drills are running on the limestone mountain getting rock ready to crush, and by another week all the projects can be said to be in readiness for the job. It has been decided it is said to build a seven-span bridge, the spans to be 20 feet each, totaling 140 feet across Flint creek directly west of the old bridge. The work at this point is well under way. Huge concrete pillars are being put in position for supports, resting on solid rock foundation. Work has also begun on the McKendree end of the Falkville pike. This project will project into one of the finest farming sections of the county, and connect Morgan with Lawrence county. At Lacon, several tented communities can be seen at close proximity to the work along the way. The work of placing the slag along the way of the Bee Line highway from Hartselle to Albany corporation line is about completed, and plans are ready for this work. It is a great epoch in road building in the county, and from this time on there will not be a year pass but that some substantial new work, or keeping in repair the work which is now being done will be carried out all through the year. A plan is being worked out it is said, that the roads now being constructed both under state highway and county supervision will be carefully looked after, once it is completed.

ANOTHER MOVE FOR HUMANE TREATMENT.

Slowly but surely the authorities of the land are awakening to the fact that because one is paying the penalty of law for violation thereof, it does not necessarily put them beyond the pale of humane treatment. Quite recently the governor of this state promulgated an official order that from this time henceforth the strap shall be abolished, and used no more in the prisons of this state. This is an enlightened step and should have been taken years ago. Many poor fellows incarcerated in the reformatories of the state have no doubt been badly treated by some fellows of a brutish nature, who held a place of power, and many with no friend at court to make for them an appeal, have been humiliated and made to bear the stripes of the lash to satisfy the demon of anger, perhaps without a just cause, or, no cause at all. It has been demonstrated time after time that a man will not be driven. Mechanically he may do the bidding of another through sheer force of fear, but, there is never a chance to better his condition or make any shambles of reformation while this process is going on.

Besides, it is criminal to abuse, and cowardly too, simply because one is in the custody of another, to be mistreated. Big men won't do it; men with the spark of the doctrine of the great humanitarian will also refrain from such a step. We are climbing up the ladder of humanity a short step at a time, and these wholesome measures being put in motion by the chief executives of our land, augur well.

DESTROYING OUR FRIENDS.

Humanity oftentimes does that which is inimical to our every interest. One among the most common forms of unthoughtfulness, is the annual destruction of our birds, which inhabit our fields and meadows, and gardens and lawns. Aside from the fact that they annually destroy millions of bugs and insects which infest the land during the growing season, and make it possible for the farmer and gardener to make the work profitable, they are our friends in other respects as well. They are friendly and prove it in a most interesting manner. Most of the singing birds build their nests and rear their young within sight of our homes, and often in very close proximity to it. It is here that they carefully watch over our gardens and flowers, and who is there who has not been enchanted on many moonlight nights by the all night song of the mocking bird, as he sings just to let the mate know he is close by. It is when the young are being reared that they are most valuable to all plants, for it is necessary for them to gather multiplied numbers of bugs, worms and insects with which to appease the hunger of the hungry mouths which fly open at every noise made close to them.

When the cold of winter is passing and spring is soon to usher in, there comes to bring us the glad news the blue bird and robin, two of the earliest harbingers of spring. How cheery their notes; what an inspiration is afforded us often by listening to them as they flit from post to post seeking out a little enclosure for their spring home where the young are to be reared. If it were not for the birds we might as well hang up our farming utensils, for it would be impossible to make a crop without them. They are entitled to more of our consideration than they receive at our hands.

Generous impulses like first impressions will not always beckon to those who fail to heed them, and turn a deaf ear to them when the call is made. There must be a ready response when these inward signals abound. To turn a deaf ear to them drowns the ambition to follow along the way suggested by the monitor within.

The principle of absolute right is at present buried beneath an avalanche of doubt and uncertainty, and is dependent for its resurrection to its rightful place, upon the sober judgment of its millions of earnest votaries.

SUPERB ORIENTAL SET
IN "FOOL'S PARADISE"
AT PRINCESS TODAY

Temple bells tolled. Jewel, flower and fruit merchants plied their trade along a broad esplanade. And directly across a short estuary towered the great temple of Wat Chang, glorious architectural ornament of the Orient.

On its steps could be seen the priests and acolytes passing up from the water's edge with their offering for the Buddha within. And just beyond the broad entrance one caught a glimpse of the Cambodian dancers, the strangest followers of Terpsichore in all the world.

Everything was there to the minutest detail, the dignified, jewel-clad nobles strolling nonchalantly through the crowds of burden coolies and grotesque beggars, the huge elephants lumbering along with howdah loads of gaily attired Orientals.

Turn on the heel, however, and one traveled in that instant the 12,000 miles back to California. For street cars buzzed along on the farther side of a small bay and in the near distance one could see beautiful homes as modern and American as the "set" was old and Oriental.

For it was a motion picture set, and said to be one of if not the largest ever constructed for a motion picture production. It will be seen in Cecil B. De Mille's Paramount production, "Fool's Paradise," which comes to the Princess Theatre today. Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris and Conrad Nagel have the principal roles.

Don't Miss "Fool's Paradise"

No picture fan who loves artistic film productions can afford to miss Cecil B. De Mille's superb photoplay production, "Fool's Paradise," which is on view at the Princess Theatre this week. It is beautiful, massive, thrilling and appealing. The cast, which includes such screen headliners as Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris, Conrad Nagel and Theodore Kosloff, is most notable.

NEWS OF MOULTON

AND LAWRENCE COUNTY

MOULTON, Ala., July 17.—Special—While driving along a mountain road near his home in the southeast corner of Lawrence County late Thursday afternoon just before the beginning of a rain, Chapley Montgomery had the misfortune to have his team of mules killed by a stroke of lightning. The stroke killed one of the mules instantly and the other died in a few minutes; strange to say, neither Mr. Montgomery nor his boy was injured by the stroke. Mr. Montgomery is a leading citizen in his community and at the time was gathering up articles for sale of refreshments at an educational rally to take place on Friday at Piney Grove School.

Principal J. B. Gibbons, of the Lawrence County High School, returned to Moulton Saturday from Florence, where he has been engaged for the past weeks as instructor in the summer session at the State Normal. He will enter actively into the work of the county high school and plans many visits to the various school districts of the county in the interests of the school. Quite a number of the Lawrence County teachers and prospective teachers came home for the week-end but are returning to the normal for the second term.

New Uses for Old Paisley and Camel's-hair Shawls.

MOST of us still remember the days when our grandmothers wore Paisley or camel's-hair shawls. These shawls were handed down in families like old lace and family silver. They were treasures with such understanding care that many of them are as good today as when they were given as costly gifts to the original owners. The writer often fancies that antiques are easily in their unfamiliar surroundings, and miss their accustomed care. Do they resent the neglect which allows moths to destroy their beauty, the carelessness which breaks strands of priceless lace, the carelessness of old silver, which less scratches and dent, and the abuse which is needlessly heaped upon old furniture?

But return to shawls, fashion has recently designed to look upon them with favor, and they are now coming in for notice, appearing in many guises. Russian blouses in the model worn outside of the skirt, in true Russian fashion are being made out of the shawls, the body white or red centres facing the body part, the deep fall below the waist, and the sleeves, while a trimming at the neck is formed out of the borders. The fringe finished at the bottom of the garment, a strip of the border is often used as a belt when the wooden head or leather girdle is not used.

The borders are also used to make bags for shopping or evening use. These bags are variously mounted, the most artistic being in metals in old-world designs. A few with embroidered carved ivory frames are seen if there happens to be a good deal of red or green in the borders used. The dark borders may be lined up with tortoise-shell fittings. Linings are chosen to match the pattern that predominates in the border.

The shawls are also being used in the making of the odd Persian turbans that are a fad of the moment, and antique shops are being sought for old cabochons or caravans of some precious stones to set in the single pompon or feather which forms the only trimming. The crowns are made of the plain-colored centres of the shawls, and the coils are of the border material.

"THE SWAMP" SUITS
SESSUE HAYAKAWA
DELITE TUESDAY

Admirably Adapted to Famous Star—Reveals Him as First-Class Comedian.

"Screen admirers of Sessue Hayakawa will find that in 'The Swamp' he has a vehicle ideally suited to his talents," declared Colin Campbell, his director, in discussing the R-C production in which the noted Japanese-American star will be seen at the Delite Theatre on Tuesday.

"Personally, I believe that Hayakawa has never appeared in a more human or appealing story," continued Mr. Campbell. "In its theme it strikes a new note, a quality of spirituality that lifts it far above the ordinary. In its unfoldment it touches upon every type and phase of love known to humanity and particularly does it show the beauty of that most unselfish love, which for lack of a better term is called 'spiritual' love."

"The romance which tingles the story with tears and just a shade of tragedy is one of the most exquisite ever translated to the screen. Hayakawa, as a humble Chinese vegetable peddler, whose love for a frail, neglected little mother and child leads him to the greatest sacrifice of his life, brings a depth of characterization that leaves one spellbound."

Large Congregation Hears Rev. Davison Speak, With 'Temptation' As His Subject

Though many of the people are away on Summer vacations, the First Baptist Church of Decatur was well filled yesterday morning when Pastor Davison spoke on "Temptation." The service was spiritual and the interest deep throughout. The choir sang "Jesus Is Coming to Earth Again," and for the offertory W. B. Shuckford rendered "Jesus, Tender Saviour" on the flute, accompanied by Mrs. T. M. Dix on the pipe organ.

The pastor read Matthew 4:1-11 and based his remarks on the entire passage.

In introducing his subject he asked the question: "Is there a devil?" He quoted a French priest as saying

"Were I convinced there were no personal devil I'd believe myself a demon, for there come ideas and thoughts into my mind that arise neither from man nor God. Then the Bible and personal experience prove the existence of the devil as a person."

The next question treated was "Could Jesus be tempted?" He answered that the key to the understanding of the temptation was that Jesus was as truly human as he was divine and that he was tempted in all points like as we are.

In treating the temptation of Jesus the minister told how He was led into the wilderness and after fasting forty days, satan tempted Him in his weakest spot to use His divine power to satisfy his own wants. But Jesus' mission was an unselfish one and he never used his divine power for his own gratification.

In the second temptation satan took Jesus to the pinnacle of the temple and told Him to throw himself down in sight of the people and gain his rule without months of waiting and much suffering. The third temptation was one to commit gross sin—to violate the first, greatest commandment.

Jesus fought the devil with his own fire. He used the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of God and put him to flight.

The Christians present were assured that satan comes to them all alike, as he did Jesus, especially when one has assumed public office or has assumed the obligation of the Christian life publicly.

"He comes," said the preacher, "immediately after spiritual experiences and in seasons of quiet which should be given to meditation and communion with God."

"While satan is spoken of as 'The adversary,' 'the enemy of man' and 'the snake,' he comes as an angel of light, with smooth tongue, and like a wolf in sheep's clothing. He tempts us to misuse every noble impulse. He misleads pride and ambition and leads us to seek honor for self. He also tempts people to do a right thing in a wrong way and from a wrong motive."

"Jesus resisted the devil successfully and if we would win we must follow His example and fight him with the Word of God. The speaker assured his hearers that it is not a sin to be tempted nor a sign of spiritual deterioration, but that it is a sign of real worth and of progress.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life." I Cor. 10:13.

"There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man, but God is faithful and will with the temptation provide a way of escape that you may be able to bear it." The congregation was called upon to witness from experience that many times they actually win victory and turn and do the sin, but that in each case of yielding God provided a way of escape if we'd walk in it with Him.

"Each one," he said, "goes through the wilderness of temptation, but that Jesus has gone 'way before and would guide each safely through if they'd only trust Him."

"God permits temptation to cause us to feel our need of Him, to make us rely upon His strength and not our own, to make us strong. The giant oak was used as an illustration. It was twisted and bent by thousands of storms, but finally the worst of winds swayed the giant only a little. So God permits the trials of life and uses them to make us strong."
